In these days of epidemics, says an exchange, it is well to take every precaution against the spread of disease. One of the most favorable conditions for the extension of epidemics is said to lie in the sprinkling of streets. This is stated to be so by so eminent an authority as Dr. Koch, of Germany. In Philadelphia the physicians are getting waked up to the dangers of this innocent-looking practice, some of the leading members of the profession having declared that the Board of Health should put a stop to it on the streets of the city, or at least upon such streets as are not entirely clean. They say just what Dr. Koch says, that the hot sun causes evaporation from the filth of the streets which is full of disease germs. These germs by this process become active and poison the air by their presence. If the streets were entirely clear, these gentlemen admit that there would be much that is beneficial in the sprinkling process. There are those in the medical protession who do not hesitate to say that the sprinkling of such streets as contain any considerable quantity of dirt is one of the most dangerous practices which can threaten the city's health.

English Sparrows.

Live Stock Record English farmers are paying a bounty of six cents for sparrows' heads and six cents per dozen for their eggs. They are becoming an unendurable nuisance in this country, but we have heard of no steps being taken looking to their extermination. They are certainly one of the greatest nuisances that ever cursed the country.

The Paducah News tells how the vistors at Dixon Springs were polled by a wag gish fellow as follows: During the day last Saturday, while a party of ladies were holding a jollification meeting under the shade of a large tree, a "Paducah wag" stepped up and proposed to take a vote on the Presidential question, which was agreed to by the party. Mounting a stump he said: All in layor of Cleveland and Hendricks stand up. One poor little innocent female stood up. He then announced that all in favor of Blaine and Logan should stand on their heads. Owing to the unreliability and flexibility of the average Mother Hubbard dress it was decided to let the matter go by default, and the "wag" announced Cleveland and Hendricks elected by a large majority.
